SECTION C  [10 MARKS]

Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions at the end in the spaces provided in the answer booklet.

At the time North-Western Rhodesia was occupied by the British, Lewanika was king of the area. Lewanika accepted British protection because he wanted protection from the Ndebele. He had influence from his friend Khama of the Ngwato people who had already received British protection in 1885. He wanted protection from internal enemies. He had fears of Germans and Portuguese who were coming in land from Namibia and Angola respectively. Lewanika also had influence from a French Protestant Missionary Francois Coillard.

It was Coillard who wrote a letter on behalf of Lewanika to the British Administration asking for British protection. When Rhodes heard this he sent F.C. Lochner to sign a treaty in 1890. Its terms were:

The BSA Company was given rights to mine in Tongaland. Lewanika was to receive £2 000 per year. The BSA Company promised Lewanika protection from Ndebele raids. The Company was to send its representative called Coryndon. Rhodes sent Coryndon to be Resident at Lealui. In 1899 the British Parliament passed a law called North-Western Rhodesia Order-in-Council. This law allowed the company to administer North-Western Rhodesia except Barotseland proper. On the basis of this law a new treaty was signed. This was the Coryndon Concession in 1900. Its terms were:

The company was given the right to govern North-Western Rhodesia except Barotseland proper. The company was allowed to make land rights and to settle the settlers in Tongaland. The company was given judicial power to deal with civil cases involving settlers and Africans. Lewanika's pay was reduced from £2 000 to £850.

This treaty made Lewanika to lose judicial powers, land rights and rights to demand tributes in Tongaland as the company started the system of taxation throughout the country. In the end Lewanika lost politically except Barotseland proper. This marked the occupation of North-Western Rhodesia.

QUESTION

SECTION F [15 MARKS]

Carefully read the following passage and then answer the questions that follow.

Far more important for the future was the impact on Zambia of the Mfecane, a series of migrations set in motion by Shaka Zulu's Empire in South Africa. Zulu raids and conquest forced some peoples to move farther and farther away in search of security while the Empire itself was torn by wars and rebellions and some groups broke away from it. One such group was the Ngoni, they took their herds of cattle far away to the north and finally settled in Ufipa to the South end of Lake Tanganyika. Here their leader died and the Ngoni split into smaller groups and dispersed into different directions settling into what are now Zambia and Malawi. Ngoni warriors, whose military discipline made them far more effective fighters than almost any other people in Zambia, adopted the local language but retained their customary way of life. They raided for cattle and for captives to increase their armies. Their assegais were deadlier weapons than any found on the plateau until the end of the century.

Another group that left was the Ndebele. They moved north and established themselves around Bulawayo in present day Zimbabwe. They did not settle north of the Zambezi but they forced another group of Sotho-speaking people to move farther up the Zambezi. These Sotho-speaking people settled among the Lozi where they established their rule. They imposed their language at great speed and soon their rule became very popular among the Lozi.
